CARD SKIMMING PREVENTION

What is Skimming?

Skimming is a method scammers use to capture a card's magnetic strip data and PIN as it is being used at point-of-purchase machines, such as gas pumps and ATMs. Scammers are then able to use the information to make fake cards, purchase goods, or sell the information.

The Interchange Payment System Benefits Consumers

Interchange fees not only protect consumers from data breaches by helping cover the cost of fraud detection, credit monitoring and fraudulent purchase protection, but they also support affordable access to credit. Changes to the current system would give more power to retailers, while increasing risk for consumers, small businesses, and credit unions.
